19 HISTORICAL OR ARCHITECTURAL IMPORTANCE
 The early history of this small mid-19th century house is difficult to trace due to the extremely complex patterns of land tenure in this part of Thompson Hill. Late in the 19th century, it was owned by Henry Elliott.
 Architecturally, it is significant as a highly altered example of the Greek Revival style. The ridge-parallel-to-street orientation and pilastered and sidelighted entry are typical of many small Greek Revival dwellings in northeastern Connecticut. The dormer, porch, and chimney are all 20th-century modifications.
